Extended forecast – A ridge of high pressure will continue building into the area from the west allowing steadily warming conditions and enhanced winds tomorrow. North winds will be sustained between 14-18mph with gusts approaching the upper-20s at times. Temperatures will track back near normal on Sunday with afternoon highs likely into the upper-70s in addition to weaker winds. North winds on Sunday may become variable later in the day as the ridge continues to progress into the Las Vegas valley.
