Extended forecast – As the pattern continues to shift in the region, unseasonably cool temperatures will be most notable Wednesday with afternoon highs only near 60-61F. A slight chance for isolated drizzle remains possible through mid-day tomorrow although conditions favor most isolated activity to remain confined to the terrain east of the area. We will begin to warm back up through the late week alongside increasing northerly winds. Gusts on Friday and Saturday may approach/exceed 20mph at times.

Forecast prepared by meteorologist Tim Calamari.
