QUOTABLES

Lydia Ko (T1, -8) on how tough it is to go bogey-free back-to-back rounds at this course

"Yeah, I'm not really sure if I had a bogey-free round at some point last year. It was a little bit more calm in the years before. Regardless of how many bogeys I make the rest of the season it's always nice to have a couple bogey-free rounds and just keep the good momentum going. Yeah, I've had to hole some good par putts but I really haven't put myself in that many difficult positions as of yet. I think that's why I had the two bogey-free rounds. I'm hoping to kind of continue that good momentum this weekend."

Lottie Woad (T1, -8) on how to not get frustrated on the course when putts aren't dropping

"Yeah, I looked at the leaderboard quite a lot today because I was getting annoyed. Seemed like there weren't that many low scores out there, so kind of knew I was still in it. The pins were probably a little trickier so weren't as many birdies as yesterday, so I just got to keep giving myself chances is all I could do. I was hitting good putts. Slight misreads here and there. I knew if I kept rolling it that some would go in."

Amy Yang (T3, -7) on what she'll do this weekend to keep up the momentum

"Tomorrow I'll just try to do the same. The weather is going to be very cold so it will be playing very different compared to last two days. It's really just simple: There is nothing but the work I've been doing in this offseason. So, yeah, just stick to process, stick to the plan, yeah."

A Lim Kim (T5, -6) on how implementing some of the things she's been working on this offseason have gone so far this week

"Yeah, so far so good. Before the tournament I really worry about that because feel like beginner. But during the tournament is better than practice, so I really wonder after that tournament, so, yeah, coming soon really great day."
