Extended forecast – Drier conditions and mostly sunny to partly cloudy skies are likely to continue throughout the remainder of this week. Daily high temperatures will gradually warm over the next several days peaking in the upper 70s to low 80s; overnight lows are forecasted to hold in the low 50s. Light and variable winds will persist each morning with a slight increase of southerly flow at 6-12 mph by the afternoon. The occasional wind gust near 20 mph remains possible. In addition, a slight chance for patchy fog cannot be ruled out mid-week with any development to favor early in the morning.
