Extended forecast – Over the next few days, generally dry conditions will persist with a mix of sunshine and clouds. A gradual warming trend will continue with high temperatures to reach the low 80s by the weekend. Overnight lows are forecasted to maintain in the low 50s. Light and variable winds will likely return each morning before increasing out of the south at 6-12 mph. The occasional gust near 20 mph remains possible, especially on Friday as westerly to northwesterly flow increases across the area. Additionally, a slight chance for patchy fog cannot be ruled out mid-week with any development to favor the early morning hours.
