Thursday – Steady moderate rain is expected to move out of the area between 8-9am. Through the remainder of the day, on and off light rain showers are expected. Cooler temperatures are expected today with a high temperature in the low-mid 60s. A slight breeze and on and off rain showers will make it feel cooler. Winds are expected to remain less than 10 mph, but a few wind gusts in the teens are possible, especially in the morning.

Extended forecast – The majority of the moisture departs the region Thursday night, but isolated rain showers will remain possible through the weekend. Otherwise, partly cloudy to mostly sunny conditions will prevail. Winds will remain elevated Thursday and then weaken back to less than 10 mph. High temperatures will remain in the 60s this week except on Friday when a high near 70F is possible, with overnight lows cooling from the 50s to the 40s over the weekend.
