Extended forecast – The heaviest of the rain showers look to come overnight Wednesday into Thursday morning, leaving only scattered light showers through Thursday morning and then conditions drying out in the afternoon. The majority of the moisture departs the region Thursday night, but isolated rain showers will remain possible through the weekend. Otherwise, partly cloudy to mostly sunny conditions will prevail. Winds will remain elevated Thursday and then weaken back to less than 10 mph. High temperatures will remain in the 60s this week except on Friday when a high near 70F is possible, with overnight lows cooling from the 50s to the 40s over the weekend.
