

THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 2026 - 5 PM U.S. WOMEN'S OPEN FORECAST

The marine layer began its return just before 4 PM with the heaviest portion focused to our south over downtown. As clouds continue to fill up the sky, temperatures will drop back down into the mid-60s as play is wrapping up with a full night of the marine layer guiding temperatures down into the mid-50s with a slight rebound into the upper-50s as the first groups tee off Friday. The introduction of intermittent clouds passing by overhead will promote a gusty setup this evening as sustained winds taper off overnight becoming light and variable tomorrow morning. Conditions for Friday remain very similar to those seen today with the sun trying to burn through an entrenched marine layer tomorrow morning keeping winds fairly light with temperatures in the low to mid-60s. As the gray skies turn blue, winds will increase out of the southwest while temperatures quickly warm up increasing wind speeds and triggering a yo-yo action with temps fluctuating near 70-degrees.
