

FRIDAY, JUNE 5, 2026 - 5 PM U.S. WOMEN'S OPEN FORECAST

We were able to maximize the shorter window of sunshine this afternoon with the high still climbing up to 69 degrees between 3 - 4 PM this afternoon as the marine layer remains at the ready just off the coast. As the evening progresses marine air will continue to funnel in over the course through the persistent southwest flow helping to organize the return of those low level clouds as the final groups make the turn. With blue skies becoming more and more gray, temperatures will slowly drift back down into the mid 60s this evening bringing wind intensity back down around 5 mph as the final putt drops. Friday was the teaser for Saturday with conditions setting up for a full day of the marine layer across the area. This extended cloud cover will do their best to limit our high to 67-degrees as enough sun sneaks through to warm up the overnight low near 60 degrees as those cooler temperatures will have winds down in the 7 - 10 mph range gusting into the mid - teens at times.
